I don't agree with it, because I think the only child in a family can prove useful and valuable. As long as he grows up in a healthy, democratic and harmonious family, he can be independent and trustworthy. Remember the kids in Sichuan earthquake in 2008. Quite a lot of them are the only child at home, but they are very strong and helpful.

References:

The new policy is implemented because China now is facing a lot of social problems, such as aging population and the shortage of youner generation. Moreover, people tend to think the only child in each family is selfish, self-centred, and lacking in the ability to communicate and negotiate with others. The new policy which encourage each family to have a second child can ease the pressure of shortage of workforce caused by aging population.
