Mr. President, Mr. (1), and Distinguished Members of the Congress:

I stand on this (2) with a sense of deep humility and great pride -- humility in the wake of those great American (3) of our history who have stood here before me? pride in the (4) that this forum of legislative debate represents human liberty in the purest form yet (5). Here are centered the hopes and (6) and (7) of the entire human race. I do not stand here as (8) for any partisan cause, for the issues are fundamental and reach quite beyond the realm of partisan consideration. They must be resolved on the highest (9) of national interest if our course is to prove sound and our future protected. I trust, therefore, that you will do me the justice of receiving that which I have to say as solely expressing the considered viewpoint of a fellow American.

I address you with neither rancor nor (10) in the fading twilight of life, with but one purpose in mind: to serve my country.

Reporter: China has delivered several decades of double-digit growth and recently 1 Japan to become the world's second largest economy. Can China sustain this performance? How is it possible to sustain this high level of 2 year after year? How reliable is the data in any case?

Jack: The transition from an agricultural to an industrial economy, particularly on the scale we are seeing in China, leads to enormous 3 gains. Growth in the past has been driven by investment from other countries and China has typically been the largest 4 for FDI. the government has also been an enormous investor into 5 and these projects then pave the way for future increases in productivity. Going forward, the shift will be for China to develop as a consuming nation.

Is this sustainable? Yes. There is a great deal of 6 behind this trend. That doesn't mean, however, that there will not be bumps in the road. Generally, with some reservations, you can trust the numbers coming out of China, and in many cases, there is corroborating evidence to support them.

Reporter: When discussing China it is a mistake to speak about it in a uniform voice. Can you talk about the differences between the North and South? The Coast and Inland regions?

Jack: China has had tremendous growth, but it has been 7. The biggest growth has been along the coast and in major cities such as Guangdong, Shanghai and Beijing. They have had the fastest growth, and there has been growth 8, but it has not been as dramatic. Between North and South, people will say the South is more business-oriented and easier, and those generalizations are useful, though not 100% 9. There are differences in the cost structures between different areas which can be very 10. Companies like Foxconn, which makes ipads, are moving their factories from the south into the inner provinces.

Reporter: Intellectual property has been a major problem in China and there is a general 1 that the legal environment is 2 which makes planning and enforcement on a range of issues difficult to impossible particularly if you become "too" 3 or come into conflict with government authorities. We also hear a lot about the importance of relationships when doing business there. How do you view this issue? Jack: Relationships are indeed important. That does not mean you need to have them when you get to China, but you do need to 4 them and use them rather than legal means to 5 your goals and interests. Concern about intellectual property is a question I get all the time. I think the actual situation is much better than most people believe. That does not mean it is not a problem, but it is not as bad as most think and it is certainly better than in the past.

For Business to Business 6 there are ways you can protect yourself in terms of how you structure your 7 and produce your products. China is also 8 more, and the more that happens, the more the country's local companies will be interested in protecting their intellectual property. At the moment, China is already one of the top holders of 9 in the world, and that will significantly change the way the country views intellectual property 10 over time.
