[1] 选项数.1

[1] 选项 A.In Greek mythology, god and man are homomorphic. Some people are physically beautiful, but also have seven emotions and six desires. They know how to participate in people's activities. The only difference between god and man is that the former is immortal without a period of death; The latter's life is limited, living and dying. The gods in Greek mythology have distinct personality, no asceticism and little mysticism. The beauty of Greek mythology is that god still has a destiny, still can be trapped by love and do bad things for his own good. Therefore, Greek mythology is not only the soil of Greek literature, but also has a profound influence on later European literature.
